The defiant lady: A comical tale of psychopomp.

The word psychopomp is taken from the Greek dialect, and it roughly translates to mean the transition of souls to the afterlife. Carl Jung also used this term to mean very similar aspects for the movement of the individual's consciousness to that of the collective and super. I truly feel that Jung was unique in his perception. If you have been privileged to read his autobiography, then you hopefully would have seen lots of references to the connections between mind and soul. As a spiritually guided person, I obviously see through the eyes of energy. A story that I found remarkable was that of the Jung Codex. Within the book the dead sea scrolls are early Christian texts. These were shown to Jung, and he was overwhelmed with the knowledge of these early Christians. He documented that he did not ever believe in his lifetime he would view something as powerful as these scrolls. It was said that he remarked that they knew what he had been studying throughout his life regarding our connection to the divine. Traditionally within Greek philosophy it would have been Hermes who would have enabled the souls of these deceased humans to make the journey into the spirit world. This is a natural process that all our energy light bodies take to begin the process of reconciling with the source of the divine. In my experience, upon human death the soul has a small pocket of time to release from the physical vessel and proceed with their energy live(s). It is beneficial where possible to unplug the soul from the body. This is ascertained through disconnecting the seven chakras as identified by the followers of the Sanskrit tradition. It can be undertaken remotely if required, and within my healing work I visualise an unscrewing mechanism attached to a cord. I would proceed to then cut and burn the cords and put them in Grandfather Fire to transform their being back to the source. If after a couple of days this has not been possible then the portal of light shall close, and thus the spirit would be left earthbound and grounded. The soul would be in a state of limbo and would have to wait until they are noticed and supported by a being who has the affinity and ability to open and close the gateway of light. This would enable them to move onto their next experience of energy living and continue with the (re)educational aspects of the soul. I hold a simple belief, which is that in order to ascertain the totality of the soul essence we have to undertake many human incarnations which may continue depending on the notion of us having learnt the required lessons. For myself I am living my last life of around twenty. After death it is very common for souls not to make the immediate transition into the light. I would anticipate that if we have eight billion humans living on planet earth then there are around eighty billion lost or trapped conscience energy forms roaming about within the lower levels of the energy earthbound realities. We have an assumption as humans that because we class ourselves as a singular vessel then it must be that we have a single soul. For me this is not the case. It would be impossible to break the human body down as we are an infinite body of cells. It was stated that there are more cells in our body than people living on planet Earth. This is about as far as our science currently has identified and I believe that our molecules and cells are infinite and in fact we are a colony rather than a physical vessel. With that concept in mind our energy bodies are too not one soul essence, but rather a combination of all of our experiences in all of our lives. I perceive the worlds, both of matter and of energy, as one big now free from linear time and all of our selves reside in that moment. Moving from that there are lots of energy in motion (Emotion) scattered all over the various spirit realms. I use the phrase energy debris as an explanation of the non-conscious energy matter. Another phrase that is common and the same type is a thought form. From my experience there are two general reasons why the soul has remained earthbound and they both can be pretty easy to resolve. Firstly, it is fear that encapsulates the energy body, and that emotional manifestation prevents the natural transition into the light. It could be that they feel afraid that they will be judged for actions whilst undertaking this specific living experience. From my understanding these souls feel as they do not deserve or do not wish to have what I see as a life audit and/or a recapitulation. Upon human death I have been shown that we enter a cinema auditorium, and the movie of our life is projected onto the screen. It's a fair and loving assessment that lasts an infinite moment. All of your thoughts, feelings and experiences of light, heavy, and shade are viewed. These include your actions and reactions. It is here that the story of your soul essence or higher self is revealed and the agreements that you made with yourself prior to entering this incarnation are disclosed. Again, I have my own way of looking at this and I actively encourage people to search internally for their definition and manifestation, thus making their dream user friendly and self-made. I perceive the agreements as ancient scrolls with the writing of an old English type, probably using a quill and ink. Within the divination of chiromancy your left palm its said tells the story of your agreed life and the right palm allows you to see how you are keeping to the map. So please remember that making mistakes maybe part of your journey. Sadly, not all lives can be of light and we often find that we learn so much more when we are sucked into the heavy polarities. The ultimate journey is that to remerge with the divine. However, to do so we have to go through many lives and keep returning until we have learnt what is required of us. In this life of Nicholas, I have become much wiser as a result of the painful stories that I have had to endure. This is not apparent whilst you are during them, however upon reflection I ascertained a far more detailed understanding of myself through the melancholy and heavy situations that I lived through. For me right now my life is simplistic and is one of love, light, gratitude and grace. This is apparent in everything that I do and undertake. I have a simple, beautiful life of joy filled with all aspects of love. So please to don't be too hard on yourself and remember this is how it was meant to be. For the earthbound spirits I would offer love and education, which generally resolves the matter. I feel a surge of warmth and experience huge satisfaction when I escort these spirits to the gatekeeper of the spirit world, and watch them fall into the arms of a loved one. All of their fear dissipates and what is left is the golden glow of the light inherently of their energy body. Another reason why the opportunity to move on is not accepted is the notion of unfinished business. If we all knew the moment of our death then we would be able to resolve all of our life issues ready for when we leave this Earth. Upon doing so our soul would not resist the process of moving on as our life issues and circumstances would have been reconciliated. When I started to study shamanism I initially found it morbid when discussing the aspects of death. I can recall undertaking a shamanic journey to the moment that I die. I found it very difficult to capitulate as I had such emphasis on living, but in terms of physiology, death is the only certainty that we have in life. As I have grown wiser and having experienced many near death scenarios, my understanding of the shamanic concept of using death as an ally has manifested into my psyche and is most definitely viewed as a gift. This concept personifies the idea that if you are not afraid of death, then this will project in the increased zest and vitality for life. A life I now see working for me, which is one totally free from any distractions. It is said that when Socrates was made to eat ground hemlock and he was about to die, his last words were that he has been set free from the evil that is the selfish agenda of humans. It was also stated that whilst he was in court he comfortably argued himself into a death sentence. This was regarding the concept of the Athenians having the freedom of choice to pray to the deity they wished to and as many as they chose too also. He comfortably one the argument, however it was not the law of the metropolis, thus he was committed to death. It was said that he asked to be bathed before his passing as it would save a job once he had gone. As there are no records to document this we have to trust in the hearsay of history.

Back in the summer of 2006 my then wife and I purchased a Victorian town house in the centre of our town which had been prominent in the carpet and weaving industry for well over a thousand years. It had been documented in the Doomsday book although the sounding of it had slightly changed over time. The houses in this vicinity where we purchased the property were built solely for the booming carpet trade of the late era of Queen Victoria. I can vividly recall our new family home was built in and around 1876. Looking back when we purchased the property the lady who sold it to us glowed with a radiance of love. When I enquired about any resident (Grounded) spirits she looked at me and said that there is a lady that resides here. I always sensed that she felt quite guilty with what she felt was burdening us with this house, and many times I have projected love and ease onto her energy body stating that everything has its place of synchronicity within universal law. Even the smallest of happenings are destined and it is up to us to be aware and not to take it these situations too personally. I have an affinity with a simple idea of listening through the ears of my heart not my mind. From undertaking this I experience and feel a greater comprehensive as the egoic mind aspect is not attempting to rewrite the story based upon its own agenda. I was listening to what the lady wasn't saying rather than what she was and it became apparent to me that she had experienced this presence. I was not unduly worried as I had come across many grounded spirits in the past and I have found it surprisingly easy to negotiate and reconcile them with their necessary or appropriate destination. I purposely write that with the intent of a self-actualized person as then I was much younger in self and full of my own self-importance and ideas concerning what knowledge and wisdom were. The Nik of today is entirely aware that each spirit can be different and not to make assumptions.

As soon as we moved in I can recollect sitting on our sofa and seeing an old lady dressed in simple Victorian clothing. She was stern and forthright in her general demeanour, and was adamant that I was going to get out of her house. I have a way of perceiving spirits that gives me an indication to what type of spirit I am dealing with. You may think to yourself what does he mean by stating that? I have a system which is built into my essence which allows me to process the data using my kinaesthetic self, accessing the information that is required in order to determine what type of soul I am dealing with. This is exactly the same approach to immediately disliking somebody whom you have just met. This all happens in a micro second within the linear time parameters, however in spirit time you have already accessed the energy body of this person and for whatever reason you do not connect. I have a beautiful affinity and relationship with my spirit team, who are always at hand to assist me with these types of situations. I have various types of allies who deal with different aspects of this complex field of work. For example, if healing work for the soul is needed then we work together in establishing a route through the scenario. In short, I would instantly know what type of soul I am dealing with and would establish the manner of my conduct and intent. This lady was not a powerful spirit, but was a hugely intent one and that in itself provides you with a delicate situation. I work in unison with universal law and one of its prime principles is that of free will. If you work against this you inherently work against the fluidity of love and light which eventually would lead to your own free will being compromised. You would become lost to your true self and this would reflect in the like attracts like scenario. I would hope that you all have watched the Star Wars Saga's and have witnessed these types of emotions overwhelming Anakin Skywalker? He eventually got so lost that he had turned to the dark side. It was all because he loved Padme so much and was terrified of what would become of their unborn children. This is a simple analogy, but very true. Getting back to the old lady, under no circumstances was she going to leave her home that she had become so attached to and loved whilst she was living her physical life. From an energy stand point she was so attached to this house and had put so much hard work into it. When her time came to move into the energy world, she obviously refused because she could not let go of this home that she adored so much. All of the energy that had been built up over the years of rituals, routines and repetitions actually encapsulated her. I assumed that it would be my responsibility to help this energy make its transition into the light. Well I can tell you that I was naïve and got much more than I bargained for. This lady had started to upset my two years old son's sleeping habits, so I decided that I would have to incorporate my spiritual training in order to ease this lady into her next happening. I opened a sacred circle and brought about working with my spirit team in order to release this spirit. What happened next is both very real and also extremely comical. The gate keeper of the spirit world ascertained in fact that I was correct in diagnosing that this indeed was a malevolent spirit who was out of place as she was grounded in the incorrect energy reality. I kindly asked her to leave and she returned with a defiant no. Her arms were crossed and under no certain terms was she prepared to go. Under the pretext of free will within the terms of universal law I had no right of place to move her on. My negotiating skills were failing so I requested to the gatekeeper that a member of my spirit team go into the realm of spirit and look for a member of her family or friendship group who could assist me in convincing the lady to move on. As I have discussed time moves differently within the energy realms than it does in linear, therefore straight away the spirit returned with a gentleman of what seemed to be a similar age and time. I was then told that this was her husband from this earthly life. I was filled with a sense of accomplishment as now I could reunite these two, thus removing her from my house. Let's just say that it did not go according to plan. I introduced myself to the gentleman and relayed the predicament that I was in. Generally, under these circumstances you would find that the spirits would be overjoyed to be reunited and they would immerse themselves in their love for one another and return to live happily ever after in whatever after life fitted their belief structure. I can't recall exactly what he said, however it was something along the lines of oh my gosh, what is she doing here and more importantly what do you require from me? I replied that this is your wife and I would assume that you would take her with you? He remarked not a chance, the only way I could get away from that women were through death, so goodbye. He put his hat on, swiftly turned around, and bid me farewell. He had exercised his right to free will. It was check mate for me. The old lady had won. I separated from my wife in 2011 and the house was subsequently sold in 2015. I often pass it and wonder what the defiant lady is doing now? From that time on I learnt how making assumptions within the doctrine of universal law, can quite be an educational experience.
